Q: Phone number change in Rails + Javascript I have the following code in my Rails application.

jQuery(document).ready(function() { var phonenumber = jQuery("#phone").val(); jQuery("#onenumber").change(function() { jQuery.post("/update_phone",{phone: phonenumber})); }); });

This works fine and I can post to the server (which is awesome). However, I was just wondering if there is a way to change the code to use what is in the database (for example: @phone = '0119343714'). I know that I can use methods to generate phone numbers but I'm trying to avoid that for privacy reasons (I don't want to publish my real telephone number to the net).

A: ok, I found my own answer, thanks to these guys: This can be achieved by using the attr_nopost unless: 'setInputDefaults()' %> and function setInputDefaults() { var phonenumber = jQuery("#phone").val(); jQuery("#phonenumber").val(phonenumber); } This way, the phone can be changed from within a web browser.
